

Amy Quinn
LPC

EXPERIENCE & SPECIALIZATIONS:

Amy was an elementary school teacher for 10 years in the Philadelphia Area. After receiving her masters degree and relocating to the NEPA area, she began working as a middle school guidance counselor. She is a mom to 3 children, one of whom has Down syndrome. This gave her reason to learn a great deal about special education and working with children with disabilities. She co-founded Abilities21 which is a support group for families who have children with special needs. Amy worked at the Center for Independent Living with teens and young adults who have disabilities. She was involved in the development and implementation of the Transition program helping these young people gain employment and learn independent living skills. Most recently, she opened her private counseling practice in Daleville PA where she works with adults and teens struggling with many different mental health diagnoses.

She has been presenting with the LRJ foundation since fall of 2018.

EDUCATION:

BS in Education from Millersville University; MA in School counseling from Arcadia University

CREDENTIALS:

Dual certification in Elementary/Early Childhood education, Instruction II Certificate, Licensed Professional Counselor